Recently the Board of Editors and the Publishers of Air Law met to evaluate our journal and to discuss observations received from individual subscribers. The meeting led to the following decisions:

As from 1992 the name of the journal will be AIR & Space LAW. The accent will remain on air law exactly as has been the case during the last sixteen years. However, we also will publish contributions on important topics of space law.

In reaction to outside observations, the Publishers will stop the forwarding of a bound volume of our journal at the end of the year. As from 1992, subscribers will receive, together with the first issue, a binder with enough place for the six issues of the volume in question. The pages of the journal will be printed in two columns as this provides for easier reading of the text.

The Board of Editors and the Publishers will do everything possible to maintain the level of quality of our journal while being open – as always – to suggestions of readers for innovations of our journal.
