

SITES INTERNET

The ASA Bulletin is proposing to its readers a section devoted to Internet sites of particular interest to practitioners in the field of international commercial arbitration. This list of those Internet sites is of course not exhaustive and will be updated in every new issues of the ASA Bulletin. This is therefore the seventh list of Internet sites of interest to our readers. We would very much appreciate our readers to contribute to the completion of this list by sending us any other interesting Internet sites devoted to the practice and the theory of international commercial arbitration. Any comments or suggestions should be sent to Patrick Dumberry (pdumberry@lalive.ch). The list of Internet sites published in previous Bulletins can also be provided via e-mail upon request. The present list of Internet sites is devoted to (public international law). Issues of public international law are increasingly arising in the context of international commercial arbitration, and especially in the fields of international investment law and State contracts.
